

Training Workshop on Sustaining River Basin Ecosystems in Hydropower Development

About

The purpose of this training is to improve understanding the concepts of sustainable development of the Lower Mekong Basin in general and the construction of hydropower dams in particular. The training will provide knowledge that can shape future leaders and decision-makers behavior and attitude with the necessary awareness practical lesson learn examples that can address the socioeconomic and environmental issues of dam development.

The training workshop will include a 2-day training and one-day field visit for getting experiences. The training is conducted by Cambodia Development Resource Institute and Institute of Technology of Cambodia with the support of GIZ-MRC Program and Network of Sustainable Hydropower Development- Mekong. The training is free of charge.

Trainers

The training will be conducting by well-trained trainers who got experiences in academic teaching and professional training in water resources and ecosystems engineering.

Target participants

Government officials: Ministry of Mines and Energy, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation, Ministry of Water Resources and Meteorology, Ministry of Environment, academic staff and students in the field of water resources, environment and ecological engineering.

Training Dates: 14-15 August 2018.

Location: Cambodiana Hotel, Cambodia.

Further information

Please contact sina@cdri.org.kh

